Panda number increasing

You must already know that the Giant Panda is an endangered species. The numbers became so low because people were cutting down bamboo forests, which is the panda's habitat. To ensure that the pandas do not die out, scientists in China have been working hard to increase the number of pandas. In the last 40 years, panda number has increased by 67%! That's around 700 more pandas! However, pandas are still endangered. We just hope that this continues!

Public helping to stop speeding drivers

Community volunteers are aiming to improve road safety by catching drivers speeding in west London residential areas in just six months. Warning letters are sent to drivers caught speeding to prevent its dangers and information about hotspots is passed on to police to inform their future activity. "We are working hard to create a safe road network". 2,021 were caught in Hounslow!

There are 70 unclaimed estates in Hounslow and your surname could be on the lists

Hounslow residents could be due to receive thousands from their deceased relatives and not even know about it. These homes would be great and would probably hold great memories. To find out if your name is on the list, check with your local estate agents or the wills of any family members, who have passed away, who are likely to give you something.

NSPCC visit Wellington Primary

This Thursday, the NSPCC came to visit Wellington Primary. The focus of the visit, was to inform children of how to deal with Child Abuse. Gabrielle, a representative from the NSPCC, kindly took her time off her busy schedule to come and talk to us. During her visit, she told us about different types of abuse starting from 'Neglect' and ending with 'Bullying'. To help her through the day, she brought along their mascot, Buddy. Year 5 and 6 were, at the end of the day, given a kit to keep in school, in which we write who, where and what makes us feel safe.

New Reception Children

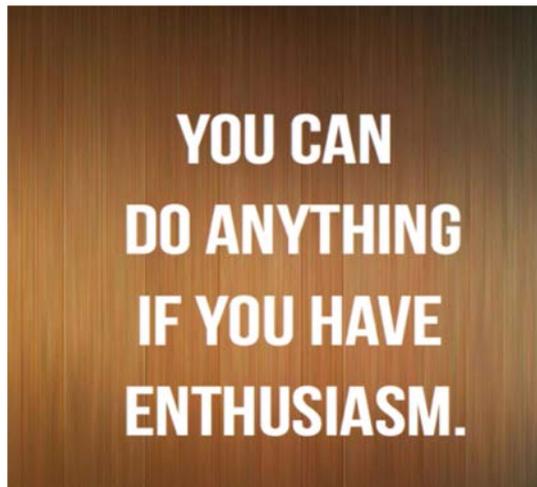

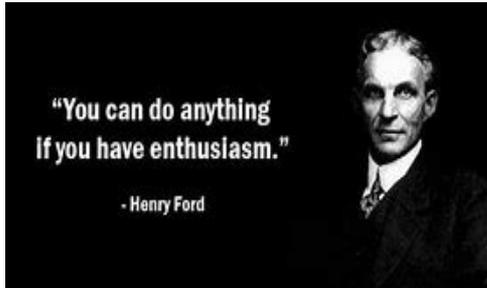

The new reception children have just joined the school, but, to help them settle in, they had a half day, just like in nursery . They will have the Year 1 and Year 2 to keep them company and have the Star Wars den to play in and will surely make new friends, since there are four reception classes! They will have half days for a few days ; they will have full days soon. We all hope they will settle in quickly and enjoy themselves!
