World's largest polluters attempts to reduce pollution

The world's biggest polluters are now attempting to make the planet leafier. This is proceeding with ambitious tree planting in China, while in India farming intensifies. Every year, around 2million square miles of greenery increases. Compared with the amount of vegetation from the early 2000s a 5% growth has occurred. Extra foliage will slow down climate change but researchers warn that this may be offset by rising temperatures.

Rare black panther caught on camera in Kenya

Black panthers are one of the rarest animals, so it is no surprise that Will Burrard Lucas was shocked when he understood that he was the first person in over a hundred years to have captured a black panther on camera. The wildlife photographer was in Kenya taking photographs when he spotted the extremely rare panther. He said that it was an honor to find one especially after many years. The panther he found was about two years old and is completely in good shape.

Year 4 Living Rainforest Trip

On Wednesday, Year 4 went to the Living Rainforest, which is a place where there is a rainforest made by people so that people can learn about the rainforest. It was very educational and improved their knowledge about the rainforest. They enjoyed it a lot and were very well behaved.

Emerald Class Assembly

Yesterday, Emerald Class presented their assembly on road safety. They remembered their lines off by heart and taught everyone something about how to stay safe in the road. In addition to this, they did some excellent roleplay and sung two songs about road safety. During this assembly, they had to be extra careful since they smashed an egg in their roleplay. However, they were very well behaved and no pupils were harmed in the making of the assembly.
